

I've had DSL service from regulated bodies (PacBell, SBC) and from non-regulated (Sonic.net). The non-regulated have been way more responsive, and as a result I have purchased more service and put my services on-line. I urge you to recognize the companies with a history of government-sponsored monopoly will become agile, responsive and satisfactory only with sustained painful competition - a condition obviously not yet achieved in the DSL marketplace.

Do not allow Bellsouth and other Bell descendants to close off the lines and networks we paid for in good faith; require this publicly-sponsored good be made available as a publicly-shared capability.

Thank you for standing true to the goals of overall best benefit to America.
